The Montgomery County Cops in Shops

program is a public collaboration developed with an understanding that community business participation in solving alcohol related issues is not just an advantage but an essential element to achieving sustainability.

Police and alcohol inspectors conduct “Cops in Shops” details.

Posing as employees, they work inside establishments to assist business owners in preventing the sale of alcohol to intoxicated individuals and youth under the age of 21. Citizens trained by police, called “Extra Eyes,” work outside the businesses. Armed with police radios, they report violations occurring in parking lots or surrounding areas.

Training attendance is mandatory to receive the overtime allocated to upcoming details.

The program will run throughout spring and summer of 2010

Training will be good for future Cops in Shops programs.
